

Retirees:

Over the past few weeks a new virus emerged across China, known as the Coronavirus. Johnson & Johnson is swiftly responding to address this emerging health crisis.

Watch the video below to hear from Dr. Paul Stoffels, Vice Chair of the Executive Committee and Chief Scientific Officer, on how the world leaders at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland are mobilizing as an industry as quickly as possible to get to diagnostics, new medicines, and interventions to prevent more people from getting infected.

Johnson & Johnson is putting people first by mobilizing our best scientists to investigate whether we can create a potential vaccine against this virus. The Company is actively working to ensure employees are protected from the virus and has distributed face masks to employees in areas of highest risk and secured additional masks should there be further spread of the virus.
